

Harvard [Author-Date] Referencing Guide

School of Nursing and Midwifery

Academic writing requires you to read, research and refer to the work of other people. Each time you write about the ideas and words of others, it is necessary to identify their work by making reference to it. You do this both in the text of your assignments, and in a list at the end of these assignments. You need to reference information from books, journals, videos, the World Wide Web and other print and electronic sources.

Many schools within the University of Tasmania have their own style guides indicating how assignments should be referenced. The School of Nursing and Midwifery uses Harvard referencing (which is one of the author-date styles). This guide gives a basic introduction to the Harvard referencing system, and follows the standard prescribed by Snooks and Co. (2002), which is the official style followed in most Australian Government publications. NOTE: [Snooks extract referring to Harvard is on eReserve in the UTAS Library catalogue].

Questions about Referencing

What is Referencing?

In your written work you will need to demonstrate your engagement with the scholarly literature. A common view by students is that “what they say has to be ‘backed up’ by a ‘reference’”. Scholarly endeavour, (such as the one in which you are engaged) is about the production of knowledge, therefore it is suggested you think of referencing more as a demonstration of your engagement with the literature, and what you have learned, as articulated through your ideas and discussion.

It is important that you understand how to correctly refer to the work of others and maintain academic integrity.

Failure to appropriately acknowledge the ideas of others constitutes academic dishonesty (plagiarism), a matter considered by the University of Tasmania as a serious offence.

When should I reference? ALWAYS

A reference is always required if you:

- directly quote (using someone else’s work in their exact words)
- paraphrase (stating other authors’ ideas or theories in your own words)
- summarise (using a brief account of other authors’ ideas)
- copy statistics, figures, data, tables or structure
- use evidence which is or might be in dispute
- use other writers’ interpretations

Why should I reference? The ultimate purpose of referencing is so the reader can find this information.

- provides the foundation (evidence, scholarship) of your discussion

- helps demonstrate or substantiate your argument
- shows the extent of your reading and research
- shows the reader the source of your information
- allows the reader to verify your data
- allows the reader to independently consult your sources

How do I reference?

The Harvard system requires two things:

- an 'in-text' reference
- a list of references at the end of the text

In-text references

There are three elements that must be included:

- Surname (family name) of the author
- Year of publication
- Page number if quoting or closely paraphrasing an author's work

Reference List

Not only must you put referencing material within your assignment (referred to as in-text), you must also have a list of references at the end of your essay, which must list all the sources cited in the text. The heading for this list is either 'List of References' or 'References' and the list always begins on a new page.

- Arrange the reference list in alphabetical order of authors' surnames, and then chronologically for each author where more than one work by that author is cited [NOTE: in a reference with 2 or more authors, surnames should be listed as they appear in the work cited];
- For each reference, the author's surname (family name) is placed first, followed by initials, then the year of publication is given followed by details of the publication;
- The name of the publication (usually a book or journal) appears in italics;
- Each entry in the reference list should be flush with the left margin;
- Do NOT put dot points or numbers in front of your references;
- There should be a blank line space between each entry in the reference list.

General comment on Harvard style – Titles

Harvard requires all titles to have only the first word capitalized, even though the book title or journal article uses more capital letters.

Exceptions to the rule:

legal documents – Acts/Bills/Hearings

proper nouns – names of people/places/organizations /names of journals

Do NOT use the term – Bibliography

A bibliography refers to a final list of all the works you have read about a subject, some of which may not have been used in writing your assignment. Academic writing only requires you to list sources you have actually cited when writing your assignment. These are included in the above described 'List of References'.

How to Avoid Plagiarism

Paraphrasing or summarising

It is best to take notes from lectures and readings in your own words. For readings, close your book, make your notes in your own words, reflecting your own understanding of the reading, and then check back to correct any misunderstood details. This way you can more easily paraphrase or summarise the key ideas from credible sources. This is the best way to provide evidence in your writing for your arguments.

The major part of your writing should be in your own words; however, all concepts, knowledge gained from elsewhere should be referenced immediately by an in-text citation and in the Reference List. No page number is needed.

EXAMPLE - SUMMARISING

McNaughton et al. (2009) write about the importance of diet in the context of diabetes.

Short Quotations

If you do want to use someone else's words, make sure you have copied them exactly AND placed them inside of single quotation marks, accompanied by an in-text citation which includes the page number:

EXAMPLE – SHORT QUOTATION

When investigating diabetes, McNaughton et al. focus 'on dietary patterns rather than specific dietary components' (2009, p.734).

Long Quotations

Long quotations of more than 30 words or approximately 3 lines are NOT PUT IN QUOTATION MARKS. Long quotations should be put in their own paragraph which is indented with an in-text citation that includes the page number/numbers. Use such quotations sparingly!

EXAMPLE – LONG QUOTATION

Breast milk is the optimal choice of feed for preterm infants and bestows many advantages. Analysis has revealed that preterm mothers produce richer milk for approximately 2 weeks post birth that may match the requirements of heavier babies (ie those >1500g) as a sole source of nutrition during that time (Bates & Ducker 2005, p.121).

Secondary citations

If you refer to the concepts or ideas of an author quoted in a journal article/book/text you are reading, you name the original author and use the term 'cited in' naming the text you are currently reading. The text you are reading is the one you include in your Reference List NOT the 'secondary citation'. The in-text citation is formatted as below.

EXAMPLE – SECONDARY CITATION

Honari (cited in Wass 1994, p.46) defines health as 'a sustainable state of well-being within sustainable ecosystems, within a sustainable biosphere'.

OR

Health is defined as 'a sustainable state of well-being within sustainable ecosystems, within a sustainable biosphere' (Honari, cited in Wass 1994, p. 46).

Referencing common knowledge

There is no need to reference common knowledge, such as the fact that Florence Nightingale was a nurse during the Crimean War. However, differing accounts of her impact on modern day nursing practice require references to indicate the source of your information and/or sources that support your argument.

NOTE:

When obtaining information from the WorldWideWeb (WWW) it is important to only refer to credible sites.

WWW CREDIBILITY CRITERIA

- author's credentials - a verifiable expert in the field; what level of qualifications does this expert have?
- verifiable organisation publishing the web page;

- could the organisation's aims bias the information being presented?
- content – is current with no errors, based on research not mere opinion
- links – connect to other verifiable sources

Constructing a reference list using the Harvard system

Only include works actually cited. The following elements must be included in a reference list:

For a book: Author(s)' surname (family name), initials, year of publication. Book title, (Edition, if not first), Publisher's name
City of publication.

For a chapter in an edited book: Author's surname (family name), initials, year of publication, Title of chapter, in Editor/s initials and surname/s (ed./eds), Book title, Publisher's name, City of publication, pp. x-y.

For a print journal or newspaper article: Author(s) surname (family name), initials, year of publication, 'Article title', Journal title, volume number, issue number, pp. x-y.

For an electronic journal article: Author(s), initials year of publication, 'Article title', Journal title, volume number, issue number, page numbers (if there are any), retrieval statement: viewed month day year, database name and/or URL.

---

For a special publication [audio/visual or some govt. publications]: Special publication title in italics if published, 'but not in italics if unpublished', description of document, day/ month of publication, publisher, city, date viewed, data base.
