What’s involved

About this course
This course is designed for recent Bachelor of Nursing graduates in their graduate transition years. As a recent nursing graduate, you will be employed and completing or recently completed your Transition Program with one of our Participating Health Care Partners.

This program will complement your Transition Program learning as you transition into practice as a Registered Nurse.

The course consists of four online units that will focus on advanced practice, leadership and policy. You will then have the opportunity to select electives within the Postgraduate coursework stream, in an area of your interest.

For an example course structure, and a list of the available elective units, visit:

www.utas.edu.au/courses/H4B

Upon completion of the Bachelor of Nursing with Clinical Honours (Transition to Practice) you will:

- Demonstrate development in your role as a Registered Nurse, and be maintaining professional relationships and collaborative work practices with colleagues;
- Consistently be demonstrating nursing knowledge and clinical skills necessary for the provision of effective and comprehensive patient care; and
- Demonstrate the knowledge and skills for advocating and protecting the rights of individuals or groups that acknowledge differences in cultural backgrounds.

*Part-time and online study is not available to international students who study in Australia on a student visa.
Where it can take you

Professional recognition
Graduates who complete Clinical Honours (Transition to Practice) will be given credit for two postgraduate elective units of study, credited towards the Graduate Diploma of Nursing.

Career outcomes
This course will support your continued development as a nurse by providing you with a formal degree qualification.

The course is also a pathway for further learning and career advancement, providing graduates with credit into postgraduate studies. Unlike traditional Honours programs, the Clinical Honours articulates to clinical specialty programs such as the Nursing (Specialisation) stream of postgraduate study.

Course structure
Available to commence in February, July or November students will study over three semesters - including a slow lead-in to the course in the first semester of study, to accommodate your work life balance.

Make it happen
If you’re interested in studying the Bachelor of Nursing Clinical Honours (Transition to Practice), you will need to meet the following requirements:

– Completion of a Bachelor of Nursing
– Registration as a nurse in Australia
– Current employment in a Transition Program with a participating agency partner; or – Recent completion of a Transition Program with a participating partner (completion within the last 3 years).

Evidence of this will be requested during your application into the course.

How to apply
It’s easy. Just head to www.utas.edu.au/apply

The people behind progress
About the Faculty of Health
Made up of two schools – Medicine and Health Science – and offering courses in everything from midwifery to medical research, the University of Tasmania’s Faculty of Health is as diverse as it is driven.

But for all these fields of study – and for all the research and innovation taking place in each of them – we’re all guided by the same common goal. To transform healthcare as we know it. And to improve the health of Tasmanians, Australians – and the world.

With staff of the highest quality, research partnerships all around the world, and an unwavering commitment to outstanding health education, we’re in a fantastic position to make progress on both a local, and a global scale.
