Exporting Citations to EndNote

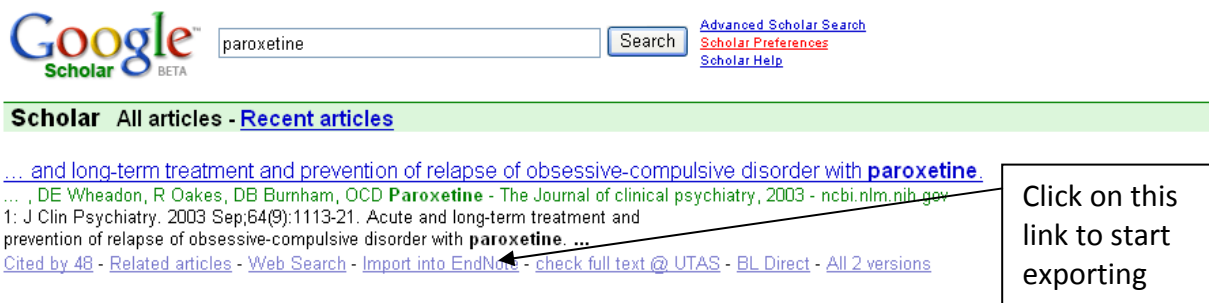

You are able to export (and import) citations from Google Scholar. However you cannot do multiple citations – each citation will need to be done individually.

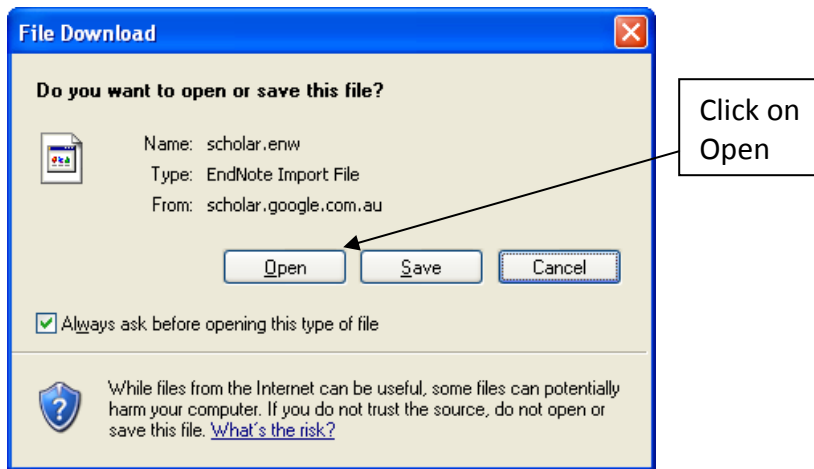

To ensure that you get the option to Import to Endnote, go to Scholar Preferences

Go to Bibliography Manager at the bottom of the preferences page

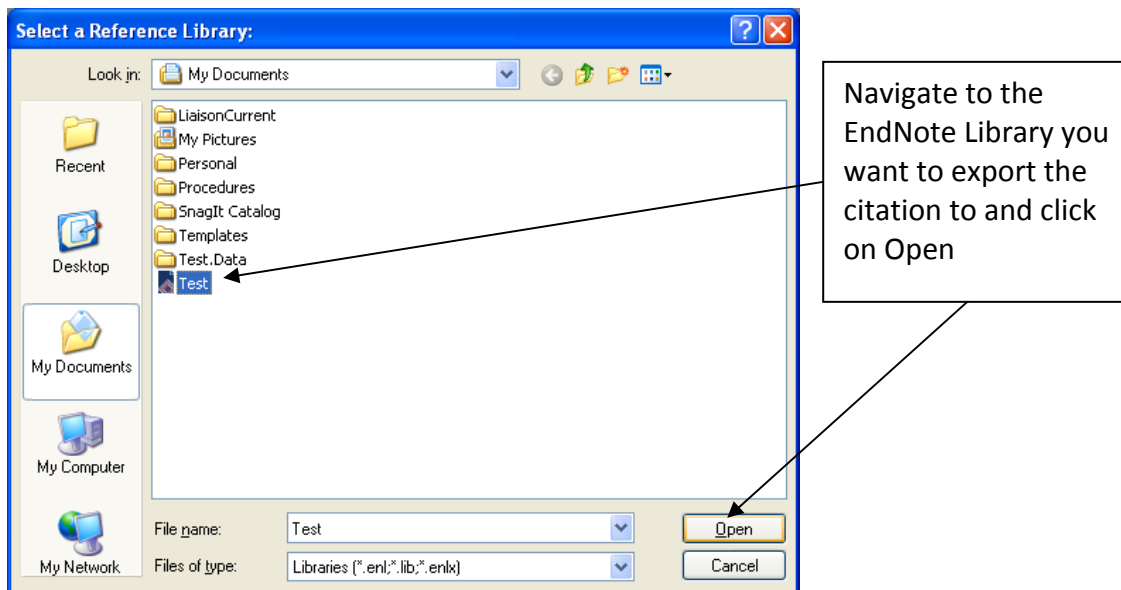

Once you have set it up you will get an option to "Import into Endnote" under each search result

Endnote will open and will then ask you to select the EndNote reference library to export results to. Once you have selected this click on the Open button

The citation will then automatically appear in your library.
