Join us in improving the lives of those affected by dementia around the globe.

We provide students with a deep knowledge of these conditions, including changes that occur in the brain, behaviours and needs associated with those changes, and the practical strategies necessary to help care for those affected.

You will gain advanced problem-solving skills, along with an understanding of the importance of evidence-based practice. Graduates will be prepared for a range of career paths in the aged care and health sectors.

The University is home to the Wicking Dementia Research and Education Centre, a global leader in dementia studies. We will help you develop specialised knowledge in this field so that you can make a difference to the lives of people living with dementia.

Our courses are fully online with no exams, face-to-face study, or workplace assessments. Dedicated Student Advisers are on-hand throughout the course, providing support and guidance throughout your studies. These programs can be studied full-time or part-time.

Ageing and Dementia Care

Two undergraduate degrees are now offered by the Wicking Dementia Research and Education Centre. The fully-online Dementia Care Degree Program is Australia's first degree specifically focused on dementia. It sets the benchmark for the value of the skills and knowledge graduates will bring to the aged care sector.

Students joining the Dementia Care Degree Program could be eligible for 100% HECS scholarships (conditions apply) for the Diploma of Dementia Care. You will gain specialist knowledge in direct care, so you can make a difference to those living with dementia, as well as their families.

Students will learn from our global experts with all our education programs informed by the latest research evidence.

It will help you understand the health conditions associated with dementia and develop strategies to improve the quality of life and care for those impacted.
