Course Description

Supervising doctoral candidates to successful completion is a complex, demanding yet very fulfilling role. It involves guiding, supporting, being a critical friend, and working closely with a candidate for several years. The organisation, structure and ethos of doctoral education, along with the composition of doctoral candidates, have changed significantly over the last two decades. The approaches to supervision are constantly evolving as well, and this programme will enable you to develop an approach that is appropriate for today's doctoral candidates.
