Maria Lourdes Faustino

Master of Economic Geology

“I chose to study in Tasmania because first, it is the home of the Centre of Excellence in Ore Deposits (CODES). It is a sought-after institution by industry geologists who are, like me, looking to enhance their exploration skills and knowledge of various mineral deposits. Second, it is the state for nature lovers and explorers very much like me.

I instantly fell in love with Tasmania the first time I landed in Hobart. The serenity of the place and everything in it suits my personality. It relaxes and soothes the mind and provides an environment conducive for research and study.

I am looking forward to eagerly share what I learned, scientific or not, to my organisation and immediate community when I return home and hope to bring positive change to the best of my abilities.”
